First Legal Investigations Assists City of Orange, CA Tackling Day-Labor Issues in Southern California

Santa Ana, CA – 10/8/2007

First Legal Investigations, a member of the First Legal Network of Companies, announced today that it was hired by the City of Orange to conduct a 109 person and 9 business survey regarding the impact Day Labor's are having on them and their businesses in the City of Orange. Per an article written by COURTNEY BACALSO, The Orange County Register, on Monday, October 8th, titled "Orange to Work on Day-Labor Issues":

"First Legal found that half the customers it surveyed said they felt less safe at stores where day laborers congregated. One-third of the customers said they had been approached by day laborers or had something offensive said to them. One-third said they altered shopping habits to avoid day laborers, and 40 percent had seen workers drink, litter or urinate in public.

In a report obtained by The Orange County Register, City Attorney David DeBerry is urging changes in the way the city-operated day-labor Resource Center operates and increasing enforcement at sites around the city where day laborers solicit work."

First Legal Investigations serves a diverse range of customers with an even more diverse set of needs.

"We're proud to assist the Orange City Council in its attempt to deal with those issues that directly affect its citizens and business owners. By offering a range of investigative services we were able to provide a unique solution to a client base as broad as the City of Orange as well as our more traditional corporate and attorney service clients", say Donald J. Fritsch, President of First Legal Investigations.

First Legal Investigations offers Skip Tracing, Asset Searches, Background Research and traditional Service of Process, Surveillance, Scene Evaluation and Recorded Statements. The First Legal Network of Companies also offers Attorney Services and Reprographics solutions to the legal and corporate community across California, Nevada and Arizona.

First Legal Investigations is located in Santa Ana, California and can be reached at 866-882-5111 or www.firstlegalinvestigations.com. CA PI#: 24171, AZ PI#: 1551710.
